

Recommendations for Jacob Heifetz-Licht

(Taken from <http://Linkedin.com/in/JacobHL>)

1. Campus Ambassador

Soylent

Andrei Lyskov

Philomath, Autodidact, Programmer, Stoic, Writer, Technophile

Jacob was very reliable and professional when I was dealing with him. He made it a point to ask questions and was quick to learn from my feedback. He wasn't shy about sharing his creative ideas for promoting Soylent on campus, and was great to collaborate with.

August 25, 2016, Andrei managed Jacob at Soylent

2. Rutgers University-New Brunswick

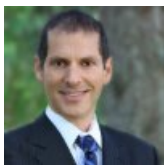

Alfred E. Blake IV

Asst. Director of Entrepreneurship Programs | Keynote Speaker | Huffington Post Millennial Columnist | Author

Jacob is a leader who makes impact wherever he ventures. I met Jacob a year ago per the recommendation of a leader whom I respect and admire. Upon meeting Jacob, I was sure that he was deeply introspective and a doer... the marks of a leader. My relationship with Jacob deepened when he became an ambassador in a program I founded called The Rutgers Entrepreneurial Academy of Leadership. Jacob was not only an active participant, but one who executed. By the end of the Academy he launched a new organization for students on the Rutgers campus. The initiative that he took to start the new organization at Rutgers was not something to add an extra line on his resume, but rather out of the sincere hope to make the Rutgers community better for artists looking to create. Jacob was not looking to add a line to his resume, but rather looking to add a line to those who are around him. I can truly say that I am confident that any organization that has Jacob on the team will benefit immensely. Jacob is as authentic as they come. At a young age, he realizes that making your mark has to do with making other people's lives better. He excels in this area because he has a deep interest in people. I am blessed to know Jacob and I highly recommend him.

June 10, 2016, Alfred E. taught Jacob at Rutgers University-New Brunswick

Randy Shain

Founder at One on One Mentors, LLC

I have been mentoring Jacob for nearly two years and cannot recommend anyone more highly. He has a rare combination of artistic and mathematical/detail-oriented skills. Whatever we discuss, he puts into action. He is an ideal employee for so many businesses and in fact, I'd like nothing more than to work with or for him myself one day.

April 25, 2016, Randy advised Jacob at Rutgers University-New Brunswick